Requirements

We are looking for a Senior User Experience Designer to work with the UX Lead to help define the business and user requirements, devise and conduct user research and work as part of an agile team to meet a mixture of short and long-term goals.

This is an exciting opportunity to join our small but enthusiastic UX team. The breadth of work offered means there will be opportunities for the successful candidate to get a broad range of experience:

- identifying and mapping potential journeys
- helping to define the user requirements for new products or platforms
- creating concepts for testing with potential users.
- understand requirements, help to prioritise them and work with the team to find optimal solutions

We are looking for someone with both research and prototyping design skills to help us build a first-rate customer experience. Someone who can demonstrate applying their experience of a variety of UX methods and techniques to create great products.

As our new team member, you will be a positive, organised, dynamic person with a flair for innovation. You will be comfortable working remotely, recruiting for and conducting interviews, running or assisting with workshops with international participants and be able to understand complex systems whilst considering the 'big-picture'. Collaborating with colleagues from multiple disciplines and serving customers from many cultures are key aspects of the role.

Our stakeholders and potential users of our digital products are worldwide so some interviews and workshops might be out of traditional working hours, but we offer flexibility around working times.
